To dedicate the final edition of our yearbook is a task of large proportions.

In the six year tenure of our junior high school, we have prospered with the combined efforts of many individuals.

We are secure in our belief that Weisser Park has affected, in a very positive way, the lives of many students.

And so, with mixed emotions of sadness and pride, it is to these people—students and co-workers who have been a part of Weisser that we dedicate the 1971 yearbook.

FACULTY

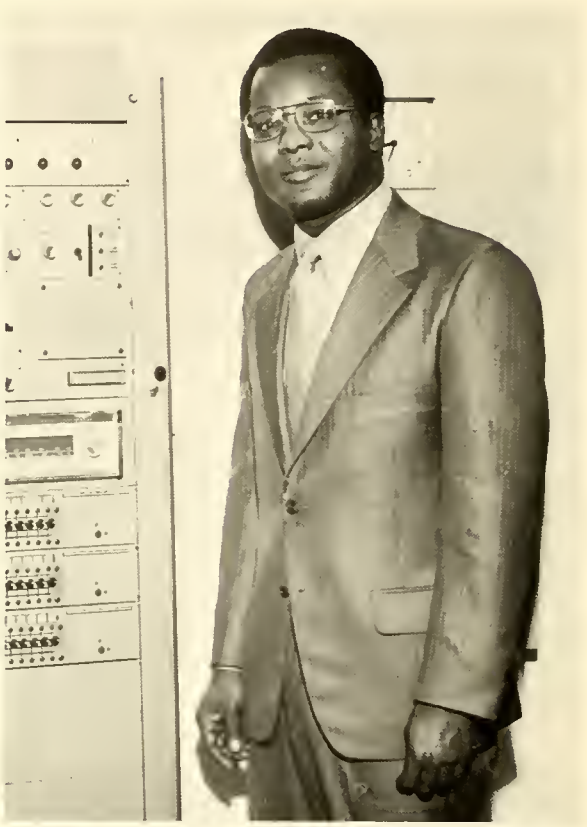
The primary function of a school faculty is to instruct, guide, and help develop the full potential of each student.

The following educators, who are members of the last faculty at Weisser Park, symbolize the dedication and patience that has always been evident at our school. They reflect many different skills and interests.

As we face new schools, and, thus, seemingly different challenges we are confident that Weisser's administration and teachers will offer vital abilities wherever they may go.

Administration, counselors prepare to leave

MR. BRAGG, who has served as principal of Weisser Park for four years, has the added responsibility of co-ordinating curriculum and activities for the next school year at Shawnee Junior High where he will be principal.



ASSUMING the duties of an assistant principal for the first time this year is Mr. David Clancy. Using his past experiences as a teacher and counselor, Mr. Clancy performs many duties during a typical school day.

FILING, typing, recording, and mimeographing are just a few of the many duties which the secretaries perform daily. They are: Mrs. Rietdorf, Mrs. Townsend, and Mrs. Kantzer.

Weisser Park, look to new worlds next year

Mr. Robert Bragg, principal of Weisser Park, must carry on his shoulders the responsibility of over 900 students. Some of his main duties are planning schedules, supervising curriculum structure and conferring with teachers and parents.

Assisting Mr. Bragg is the assistant principal Mr. Clancy. He supervises the lunchroom, disciplines students, and helps to organize the daily routine of the school.

Helping the students decide the courses they will be taking next year are the counselors. Along with this, they must take measures to make sure all students are in homeroom. Mr. Stults has assumed the responsibility for a detention hall for all tardy students.

In the office every morning are the nurse and the secretaries. They take care of all the paper work and anyone that is sick or injured.

MRS. VACHON, the school nurse, looks on as Mrs. Till checks the results of Mrs. Sams's tuberculine test.

STUDENT behavior and adjustment are important concepts to the school counselors. Assistance in selecting courses for high school and locating jobs for interested students is also available through the counseling program. Weisser's counselors are: Mr. Davis, Mrs. Klus, and Mr. Stults.

ACADEMICS

The success of any curriculum is dependent upon a logical, well-organized approach to each vital subject area.

We are proud of the academic departments at Weisser Park. Because of the diversified courses, students are constantly faced with new challenges and concepts.

Each area has a department head who organizes and coordinates the activities of the teachers, who in turn prepare this material for classroom presentation. Students must then dedicate themselves to hard study.

Science explores life,

CALLING on one of his eighth graders, Mr. Murray asks her to explain the weather chart.

EXPLAINING her Science Fair project to Tom Black and Susan Falkner, Cindy Berning holds one of her gerbils.

STUDENTS in Mrs. Childers' math class are encouraged to think problems out carefully themselves before asking for assistance.

nature; mathematics encourages thought

Striving for higher levels of insight students study the importance of scientific facts. The combination of X and Y lanes is being used as an experiment during Weisser's final year. For the Z lane classes there is a class of Biological Science Curriculum Study. Both of these classes are concerned with life and its many facets.

Around 150 students were entered in the Science Fair this year. Students were encouraged by their teachers to participate in this annual event.

The different exhibits were judged on knowledge of subject, originality, scientific value, and effort. The different categories which were available this year included earth science, zoology, math, botany, chemistry, and engineering. Many students were awarded ribbons including first, second, and third place. The students who won first prizes were then eligible for the Regional Science Fair which is held at the Memorial Coliseum. This was truly an interesting year for science students.

JESSE BEASLEY and Ed White look on as Mr. Morton points out the different cavities and chambers of the heart.

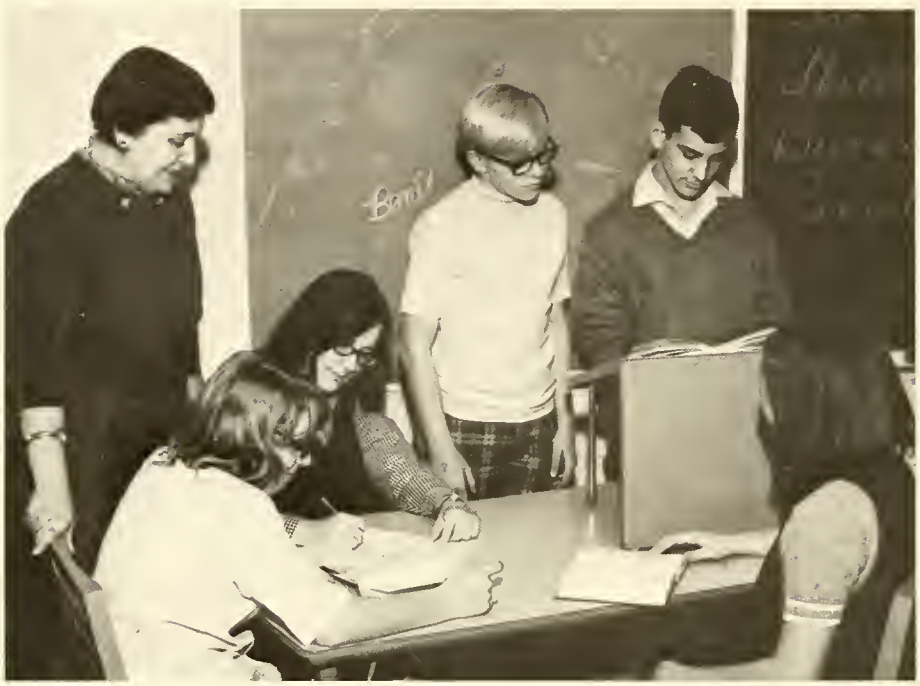
Study of languages broadens communication . . .



READING and studying poetry are members of Mrs. Bartkiewicz's poetry club. They are: Mary Wagner, Mrs. Bartkiewicz, Anna Gall, Wayne Erickson, Todd Stouder, and Elizabeth Kessler.

Through the Language departments, students learn how to communicate properly and study great literary works. Freshmen carefully study the works of Homer, Charles Dickens, and William Shakespeare, while seventh and eighth graders build a strong background in grammar.

Poetry is studied on a large scale in all grades. Besides studying famous poetry, students are encouraged to compose their own.

Building speed in their reading skills and learning to get the most out of what they read are the main goals of Developmental Reading students. With the help of reading machines and books, students also learn good reading habits.

DEVELOPING speed in reading, learning how to use the library, and analyzing newspaper techniques are a few of the concepts stressed by Mrs. Weick in developmental reading classes.

STUDENTS in Mrs. Sams' eighth grade language arts class enjoy taking parts in oral readings of plays.

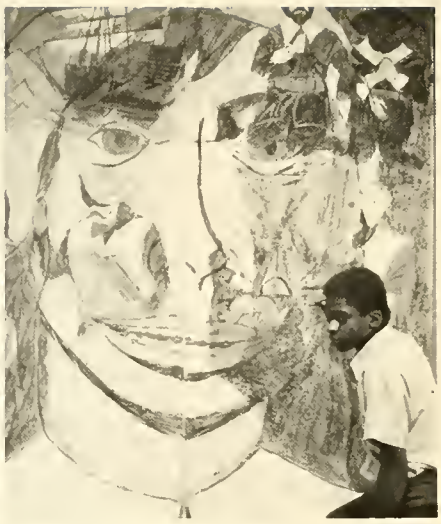
social studies seek new dimensions of man

Spanish is the foreign language offered to ninth grade students at Weisser. Students become familiar with the language through the use of tapes, films, books, and by reading aloud in class. Spanish customs and ways of life are also studied in class.

Studying the world they live in, social studies students gain a greater knowledge of what the earth is like, how it differs, the ways of its peoples, and how they themselves fit in.

Not only are geographical studies made, but the history of the world and the United States are studied in depth, and students become familiar with how the U.S. used to be and how it is today.

STUDYING various geographical areas of the world is an important part of geography class. Here, Mr. Epps points out an area of interest to a couple of his seventh grade students.



ROOSEVELT HUTCHINS stands in front of his art creation which was shown in the library for Thanksgiving holiday.

COMPOSING PORTRAITS are: Calen Setser, Debby Showers, Richard Clark, Stacey Laspley, and Byron McLemore.

Special skill classes encourage creativity . . .

Students in various classes learn different skills, from constructing cabinets to playing Burt Bacharach music in a band.

In shop and home economics, boys and girls learn how homes function and how to take care of their families when they are older. In home economics the girls highlighted cooking with a soul food banquet. In shop the boys created various things such as cabinets, and metal projects.

Artistically inclined students work in art on clay figures, water colors and pictures for audio-visual presentation.

WORKING at a sheet-metal cutter are Mr. Hopkins, Steve Gordon, Buford Majors, and Dave Kesterke.

PREPARING biscuits for the Soul Food banquet, Trina Bright listens as Mrs. Prichard instructs her.

MR. GERIG directs the concert band at their performance for the school.

provide time for practicing, building skill

With talent blossoming, music students learn about various composers and their masterpieces. Instrumental students study different rhythm patterns along with different signs in music.

Profiting from the skills learned in typing class, students practice writing letters, outlines, and themes. While doing this they must gain in speed and accuracy.

Taking these courses has helped students to become skilled in special fields.

SKILLFULLY typing are students, as Mrs. Keller watches over Alisha Green in typing class.

Health, physical education promote vitality

Studying the different parts of the body, students in health class learn some of the secrets which have been revealed through the magic of science. Speakers and movies concerned with the drug problem in the world were presented to the students this year.

Learning the do's and don'ts of driving, students saw many informative movies during the 30 hour course of Drivers' Education which was also a part of the health classes this year.

Under the direction of Mrs. Novak, Mrs. Zak, Mr. Gurnell, and Mr. Barker, students participated in basketball, tumbling, volleyball and many different sports.

IN HEALTH CLASS, students are required to become familiar with the basic structures of the human body. Mr. Morton stresses a point as Shirley Hatch looks on.

LISTENING to instruction is an important part of physical education classes. Here, girls listen as Mrs. Novak explains the basic principles of volleyball.

EXERCISING to build strong bodies is a major goal of physical education. During nice weather students' classes are held outside.

ACTIVITIES

Over 900 students made up this year's student body. Each member attended classes and was given the chance to participate in extra activities.

Classes are organized so that, as a member of a class, every student may take special pride while encouraged to add his support.

Weisser Park has always taken pride in its large amount of diversified activities.

In exploring new areas of learning, the student becomes more aware of opportunities that could have remained hidden.

Ninth graders experience many innovations . . .

Publications keep record of school's last year

Working extremely hard to meet many deadlines, Publications staff has had a large amount of work. Under the direction of Miss Beckley, each month the students published the school newspaper, THE WEISSER WAY. Each edition had to be proof-read and checked in final form by the co-editors before it was sent to be printed.

This club has helped many students learn the values of journalism, and has shown them the various aspects of editing and publishing a newspaper.

The same students who did the majority of the writing for the newspaper also spent many hours writing the school yearbook, THE WEISSER WORLD. Many nights after school and several weekends were spent by the yearbook staff for the purpose of editing and putting into final form the pages of the yearbook. The hours spent were given in the hopes of making the school proud of their achievements and for making a record of Weisser Park's final year.

Reliable workers offer time, energy, valuable

Learning to speak to people and in front of groups is just one of the skills that is stressed in Leadership Club. This club also sponsors extra-curricular activities such as trips to debates and to different hospitals.

The Student Council has had an extremely busy and eventful year. Through homeroom representatives and Council officers, many projects have been successfully carried through, such as changing the school dress code to a more liberal one, concluding the annual Thanksgiving Food drive, and launching the school clean-up project.

The student cafeteria workers help greatly in serving the hot lunches during the school day, while at the same time learn how the school kitchen is run.

assistance toward providing school services

Keeping the library in order is the main duty of the library service club. Besides arranging the books on their proper shelves, members learn how to do other duties, such as filing and carding books, and helping check books out.

In Audio Visual Club, boys learn how to operate the audio visual equipment. These students also assist teachers with the equipment when help is needed. Proper use of the equipment and knowledge of how to use it helps keep the machines in proper working order.

The School Service Club is one of the new clubs started this year at Weisser Park. The main objective of the school is to promote cleanliness, and to help assist at public school meetings. Besides serving the school, Service Club has sponsored several dances and held dance contests for students to participate in.

perfection are main themes for musicians

Keeping up with the times, the music department has bought all new music for the concerts that are performed twice every year. Along with this the concert band spends time to enthusiastically practice for the basketball games in which they have given their best to promote spirit toward the team and the school.

The choir this year, under new direction of Mr. Sharp, has worked to the best of their abilities in practice and in performance. Much time after school is spent so that the choir will have a perfected masterpiece for the enjoyment of the school at concerts.

Also under new direction is the orchestra. Mr. Gerig has shown the students the added polish that they will need to know in future years. Since most of these students are seventh graders this is the first time for them to perform before a large audience. They hope that they have let people enjoy the works of many composers.

New to the spring concert this year is the Cadet Band. These students are all performing for the first time this year. There may be a few sour notes but the students are progressing well and have enjoyed playing.

Chess and Checkers Club teaches students how to play a better game of chess or checkers, and the basic knowledge needed to win these games. Students also enjoy playing both games by competing against other members of the club.

Typing Club is offered to the seventh and eighth grade students. They learn the basics of typing and also are given the chance to practice these skills.

For those students who wish to further their reading skills and speed, Reading Club is offered as an after school class. Students who do not have reading classes also are able to join and read for fun.

SPORTS

A sound mind and a sound body is the theme of the Weisser Park sports program.

Dedicated coaches spend much time and energy in promoting and developing the athletic abilities of those students who are willing to put forth the extra effort necessary to become good athletes.

The following sports section records the triumphs of winning and the sadness of defeat. But most of all it shows a total involvement of spirit, body, and mind that is achieved only through dedication.

Varsity Owls take south division championship; reserve team follows, takes runner-up title

Because this is the last year for Weisser Park as a junior high, members of the football teams worked to the best of their ability to bring home trophies. The varsity showed how their practice paid off, by tieing their first game with Northwood 14—14.

As in Weisser's former years the varsity team won the South Division Championship. But it was a disappointment to all when they were defeated by Lane 23—12 in the City Championship.

Following in the footsteps of the varsity, the reserve also became runners-up for the city title. The reserves ended their season with a 5—0 record, while the only touchdown against them was in the championship game.

Varsity Owls have best overall city record; Reserve team captures city championship

Falling short of the city championship the varsity Owls ended the season with an over-all record of 11—2, best in the city. Winning the eighth grade city championship was Weisser's reserve team. Both teams worked their hardest to make their last year their best.

GOING high for a basket against Kekionga is Reggie Burt.

Athletes work, try hard; face disappointments

Although the boys worked hard this season in cross country and wrestling they were still unable to bring home a trophy.

Through many hours of practice, running, exercising, and other many strenuous activities, they try hard to improve their minds and bodies.

The season may have seemed to be a disappointment to some, but the members of both sports were deeply rewarded in experience.

CHEERING the Owl teams on to victory this past year was a pleasant task for the varsity cheerleaders. They are: TOP TO BOTTOM—T. Thomas, D. Williams, Q. Howell, D. Underwood, and S. Muff. Also assisting, but not pictured, was Larry Ryan.

Enthusiastic cheerleaders boost school morale

"Be cool, calm, and collected!" was the advice given to the football and basketball players this year by the varsity and reserve cheerleaders.

These energetic girls, along with the band and enthusiastic students, led the football team to a runner-up position and the basketball team to an outstanding season.

The reserve cheerleaders had the pleasure of cheering the eighth grade Owls through an exciting season to a runner-up position in football and city championship in basketball.

Most of the cheers prepared this year were from clinics at North Side and given by the cheerleaders themselves. The girls have learned a lot about being better leaders and keeping high spirits.

A CITY championship in basketball and a winning season in football bring smiles to the faces of the reserve cheerleaders. They are: TOP TO BOTTOM—R. Swartz, R. Sanders, C. Barnes, M. Shaleen and S. Snow.

Thus, we bring down the curtain on our yearbook and on Weisser Park as a junior high school.

Even though we will not again function together as members of the same school, we and those before us carry with us a portion of the spirit that has permeated the school's existence.
